ANDY SHAW

Andy Shaw, a well-known figure in American fencing, first garnered national attention with his NCAA-leading 35-1 record for the 1970-71 season while earning the MVP and the Outstanding College Athletes of America

Award at Temple University. Andy excelled in every area of fencing. In 1974, he founded Atlanta's first fencing club and coached Georgia Tech's first team. While in Los Angeles, Andy ran the Westside Fencing Center for 13 years, which allowed him the opportunity to train several stars for their roles in major films. Among those Andy trained are Bob Dylan, Jimmy Buffet, Chris O'Donnell, Kiefer Sutherland, and Russell Crowe.

Besides being an active coach and trainer to fencers, Shaw worked as a trainer to fencing officials and by the 1990's, he was the best-known and most-utilized fencing official in the United States. He held the highest rating given domestically (#1 for nine consecutive years) and was a member of the United States Fencing Officials' Commission. Andy currently serves as Chairman of the US Fencing Hall of Fame, and served as the "Fact-Check" Fencing Consultant for NBC Sports for the 2004 and 2008 Olympic Games. In 1990, Shaw was appointed Official Historian for the US Fencing Association and became an Associate Editor for American Fencing Magazine. Shaw moved to Shreveport in 2002 and opened the Fairfield Avenue School of Fencing and the Museum of American Fencing, the only fencing museum in the United States.
